New Horizon
in NAEYC's journal Young Children!

Beginning March 2010,
Young Children will feature a new column

Our Proud Heritage

... highlighting the robust contributions of people, movements, and ideas in early childhood education that ushered in the present and will lead us into the future.

How did early childhood leaders get their start and influence children's lives?

Ever wonder . . .

Why and how did unit blocks come to be?

Could I write about the heritage of the early childhood field for Young Children?
